Students design Spirit Rover robot to retrieve biohazards

By Grant Cree

Students in the Robotics Club at Sturgeon Composite High School unveiled the name of their robot Spirit Rover during a media open house on Nov. 6 at the school. Students and staff eagerly shared their ideas on why and how they created Spirit Rover, their autonomous bio-hazard collecting robot.

Kevin Hubick, Mathematics and Computing Science Teacher at Sturgeon Composite High School leads the Robotics Club. He explained that a dozen students spend about seven hours a week, outside of regular classes, to plan and continuously create their robot. “They wanted to build something big and useful,” said Hubick. “I did a Google search and noticed there was a lot of stories about people being accidentally pricked by hypodermic needles discarded in parks. And I want to recognize and retrieve these dangerous biohazards so parks could be safer.”

The initiative is a student-based STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Math) project supported by a $5,000 grant from APEGA (Association of Professional Engineers and Geoscientists of Alberta) in Edmonton.

The APEGA grant was based on the project meeting several criteria: Provide hands-on enrichment opportunity, increase awareness of the application of technology, challenge students through problem-solving and critical thinking, and engaged students in resolving societal challenges.

“I really love robotics because I enjoy making stuff with my own hands,” said Grade 12 student Shea Mullins. He was busy operating the arm of Spirit Rover that was programmed to pick up a syringe on workshop table and drop it in a small box nearby. “I have to give it the basic commands but it’s basically automated so I don’t have to manually tell it to lift the syringe and put it in that box.”

Robotics Club students hosted demo stations to show computational vision, targeting and robot prototypes. “This project incorporates a lot of creative and collaborative thinking on the part of its members,” said Hubick. “What I find most inspiring is the students’ drive and determination. He marvelled at their enthusiasm to work through lunch, after school and occasionally in the evenings to spend time on the project.”

“I’ve always been fascinated with stuff that moves. Anything that has gears and cogs going, I just love it,” said Grade 12 student Brody Lebid. “This class helps me learn problem-solving skills. I want to be an engineer and designer for either airplanes or cars, something along that line.”

Breakfast Club celebrates $5 million commitment from Pembina

Bon Accord Community School students receive breakfast from Sturgeon County councillor Patrick Tighe (behind table L-R), Pembina Redwater volunteer Dwayne Legge, school breakfast co-ordinator Cindy Briggs and Breakfast Club of Canada representative Brett Clapperton. Pembina Pipeline Corporation and Breakfast Club of Canada celebrated their $5 million partnership with breakfast at Bon Accord Nov. 5.
"We are reviewing the potential impacts on Sturgeon County’s 2020 budget and have been considering various alternatives to ensure we balance the needs of our residents with the realities of today," said Sturgeon County Mayor Alanna Hnatiw.

She was the keynote speaker to approximately 70 people who attended the monthly Chamber of Commerce luncheon on Nov. 6 in the Morinville Community Cultural Centre. Numerous business leaders, several elected officials and local citizens attended the event.

Mayor Hnatiw noted the county started the path toward fiscal sustainability and ensuring the growth of the local economy shortly after council was elected in 2017 by initiating an Operational Efficiency Review with an external financial firm. The purpose, she said was, "... to ensure we had an unbiased view of how we could improve the County’s administrative ability to achieve our strategic priorities."

The review identified 48 recommendations, some of which could be implemented without additional resources, while others would require some form of investment. The mayor credited Chief Administrative Officer Reegan McCullough for making some restructuring changes, and noted that more than half of the recommendations have been implemented. "The remaining recommendations are now being reviewed through our annual budgeting process," said Mayor Hnatiw. "Together, these initiatives will align our organization for growth while continuing to provide quality, cost-effective services to our residents and businesses while aiming to keep taxes low."

The mayor also spoke about the provincial government’s efforts to reduce its budget deficit, but added, "We do not believe that this objective should be achieved on the backs of Sturgeon County property taxpayers."

She went on to say, "Municipalities will take a hit to infrastructure funding over the coming years, reduced Municipal Sustainability Initiative funding may cause some disruption as we maintain a wide range of service for our residents, such as roads, bridges, and water and wastewater systems. There are still questions to be answered to clearly understand the impacts to our municipality."

Mayor Hnatiw referred to changes this year in the federal and provincial governments, remarking those factors, "... will add to business uncertainty. This uncertainty will impact economic growth, in the short term. While these challenges exist, Sturgeon County will not sit around and wait for someone else to determine our destiny."

She spoke of initiatives to enhance the County’s competitiveness by reviewing four key elements: 1) the local regulatory environment, 2) prioritizing infrastructure needs, 3) working with the provincial and federal government to encourage more investment in this region, and 4) reducing County operating expenditures.

The mayor emphasized the importance of working with the municipalities of Strathcona County, Lamont County, Fort Saskatchewan and Edmonton along with domestic and foreign investors to attract large-scale, value-added investments to generate economic activity for decades.

"These types of large scale, world-class investments will create many new construction and permanent jobs, contribute to our infrastructure, schools and health facilities, and ensure the safety and security of our residents," said Mayor Hnatiw.
Most people have been affected by the Stollery Children’s Hospital in one way or another. Whether it was used by their child, a niece or nephew, grandchild, or through a friend or neighbour. It is well known, the impact it has for children. The Sturgeon Community Hospital (SCH) in St. Albert has had a dramatic increase in baby deliveries in recent years and was the largest neonatal site without neonatal support. October 28th was a big day for the Stollery as it opened the doors to its Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU) at the SCH. The new, 6-bed unit provides the specialized, family-entered care to the sickest neonatal babies in St. Albert and surrounding areas, closer to home.

Morinville Dairy Queen owners Marc and Michelle Cardinal have been strong supporters of the Stollery Children’s Hospital Foundation with their annual Miracle treat day campaign. With the Stollery bringing things a little closer to home, they wanted to participate in a different fundraising campaign.

Marc is a member of the Canadian Progress Club in St. Albert. A club with 12 members that endeavours to enhance the lives of underprivileged and ailing individuals in the community with financial aid, event support and volunteerism. Marc presented the idea of a campaign similar in nature to purchasing a brick on a wall with a family name engraved on it, but perhaps for it to be for a border of a mural. Craig Strain, another member of the club has partnered with Marc to see this idea through.

The club has officially partnered with the Stollery Children’s Hospital Foundation with the help of Development Officer of the Foundation, Nafisa Bowen. As part of the Foundation’s $2 Million campaign goal to fund state of the art equipment and training, they have teamed up with Mural Mosaic artist Lewis Lavoie to create a one of a kind piece of art that would be a lasting tribute showcased in the family lounge area of the new NICU.

The concept will be executed by artist Lewis Lavoie and his team, however, those who wish to donate can submit an image, or logo and an artistic version will be created for the mosaic. The original will be provided to the donor and a copy will be used as part of the greater art work. Strain says, “it’s an opportunity for people, families, or businesses to create a lasting impression of their commitment to their community.”

The group is hosting a “Sip and Support” evening on Nov. 13th at the Art Gallery of St. Albert. The event will feature 630 CHED Morning Show Host Ryan Jespersen, Mayor of St. Albert Cathy Heron, Lewis Lavoie will do a live art demonstration, and entertainment by the Don Berner Trio. Tickets are $25 and can be purchased on the Canadian Progress Club website. The event is a call to action to create awareness of the fundraising campaign and to present the opportunity for potential donors to learn more about the project. To learn about how you can participate in the project and the levels of involvement, visit www.stollerykids.com/sturgeon.

Dedicated Poppies to honour the fallen

by Amy Hibbard-Hiscock

The Town of Morinville office in St. Germain Place has a bit of added light and a splash of red during the first number of days in November. This is thanks to a Poppy Tree that adorns the common area and features hand crocheted poppies, made by local resident and retired military RMS Clerk (Navy), Lauri Allen.

Lauri Allen was a member of the Canadian Military for 20 years and retired in 2017. Before her retirement however, she wanted to find a way to guide her path to self-healing from fallen soldiers during her time served. She was a Hat Bearer thirteen times over while in Afghanistan. She would walk behind the casket and turn over the beret of the fallen soldier to whom ever was escorting them back to Canada. 13 times. Allen knew only 1 of them, however, she has been deeply impacted by all of them.

She feels it is of utmost importance that no one is forgotten and that their honour is recognized. Her healing started when she created 159 poppies to represent the 158 soldiers and 1 civilian who lost their lives in the war in Afghanistan. She initially wanted to put them on a tree in her front yard for people to see, but realized that her home wasn’t in the best location to promote this. She contacted the Town of Morinville and they offered to have it featured for them. The project has since grown from various requests from people wishing to dedicate honour to their loved ones. “The community has embraced this and I want to keep going,” says Allen.

She has created poppies for military members who have lost their lives to suicide, to wars and even veterans who fought in the world wars. She has honour members from Newfoundland to British Columbia and every province and territory in between. She has even had request from Australia and New Zealand! “If someone contacts me to create a poppy for their loved one, I will do that,” Allen adds. The photos featured on the Poppy Tree are not necessarily just local based members, but rather just any member who have been requested to be added as a tribute. This year, Allen has made 300 Poppies for the tree. They are all available to be taken free of charge, however any donations will be forwarded to the local Legion Poppy Campaign.
Refined gasifier to go through more testing

The Sturgeon Refinery gasifier unit passed its initial test run, stable production of hydrogen and carbon dioxide (CO2) was achieved last month. “Four weeks of testing resulted in the production of on spec hydrogen and CO2, and generated valuable data for our ongoing work,” said North Redwater Partnership (NRP) External Relations manager Vanessa Goodman. “The gasifier has proven to be the most challenging unit in the refinery to start up, and this data will help our team assess any areas requiring improvement moving forward. Additional work on the gasifier is ongoing, and another test of the unit is planned for early 2020.”

The gasifier unit is a major processing component for refining bitumen. For the past two years the refinery has been refining synthetic crude oil into ultra high. For us, this painting is a recognition of the commitment and sacrifice of many to the Canadian community.”

‘Northern Tears’ painting now at Edmonton Garrison

by Grant Cree

Morinville artist Dolly Bolen presented her painting “Northern Tears” to members of the Conflict and Complaint Management Services (CCMS) team at Edmonton Garrison. The presentation took place on Nov. 7 in the CCMS offices where the painting was immediately placed on a wall in the office reception area.

“The tears on the poppy in my painting are for the tears shed by the families and friends for all soldiers killed,” explained Dolly. “My painting now represents all the coalition soldiers who have died in Afghanistan.” She noted the poppy is a symbol of Remembrance. The Inukshuk in the centre of her painting was based on a photo of an Inukshuk built by soldiers of the 3 PPCLI Battle Group in Afghanistan. They constructed it after four PPCLI soldiers were killed in a friendly fire incident in April 2002.

CCMS Regional Manager Heather Ehlers was grateful for the painting. “We are here to support members for any difficulties they’re having,” said Ehlers. The CCMS mission is to enable the Defence Team to effectively manage their conflicts and complaints early, locally and informally where appropriate.

“Stress and conflict and complaints are part of any workplace,” said Ehlers. “But stress that some members face here are unique, the expectations are very high. For us, this painting is a recognition of the commitment and sacrifice of many to the Canadian community.”
