Wide range of questions for candidates seeking to be MLA

Health care, education and carbon tax were the hot topics at the Athabasca-Barrie-Westlock all-candidates forum in Newbrook April 2. The five candidates in the riding summarized their platforms and fielded numerous questions at the Newbrook Library.

Independent candidate Brad Giroux said that, if elected, he would be free to support and vote for changes that would benefit the people in his constituency, regardless of which party formed the government. “Know who you’re voting for,” he urged. “Know where they stand and go for it.”

Alberta Independence Party (AIP) candidate Buster Malcolm said his party would hold a referendum on independence, and if it is positive, stop equalization payments. That would provide $34 million per year into every riding in Alberta. As for being land-locked, he said the United Nations’ law of the sea would require Alberta’s neighbors to assist in building pipelines to the ocean.

Alberta Party candidate Wayne Rufiange said his party would put people back to work by getting the oil flowing again, support public services and take care of children.

United Conservative Party (UCP) candidate Glenn Van Dijken said a UCP government would re-energize the economy, create jobs and repeat the carbon tax. “We need to be able to compete globally,” he said.

Alberta New Democratic Party (NDP) candidate Therese Taschuk pointed out that individuals making less than $45,000/year receive back all the carbon tax they pay. She highlighted the NDP’s construction of 240 schools, creation of 80,000 jobs and green energy program.

Moderator Krista Perry channelled questions from about 35 area residents to the candidates, having each question answered by at least two people.

Asked what the carbon tax is being used for, Taschuk said the money is invested in green energy and to support diversification of the economy. Rufiange said his party would remove the carbon tax from households and apply it only to heavy emitters.

Juanita Krause noted that if the UCP cancels the carbon tax, the federal carbon tax would apply. Van Dijken responded the UCP believes it falls under provincial jurisdiction and would take the federal government to court. Malcolm said it wouldn’t be an issue if Alberta became independent.

Taschuk said instead of spending millions to fight the federal government, the NDP is using the carbon tax to support green energy, and 60 percent of households get the carbon tax back.

Joyce Ollikka asked Van Dijken if he supports the UCP proposal to set up for-profit health clinics that would create a two-tier health system. He replied that quality health care and education would be protected, and research is being done on the ways other provinces have reduced wait times.

Taschuk advised that three new doctors were brought into the riding. Van Dijken said the NDP government is working on additional teaching assistants and smaller class sizes after years of funding being chocked to school divisions. Malcolm said education and supports for children need to be funded without running up deficits. Giroux pointed out that throwing money at them doesn’t work, the intent to have teacher resources and mental health support needs to be at the forefront. Rufiange said schools need to have programs to make all students successful. The Alberta Party would double inclusion funding because right now classroom borrow and borrow.

Redwater completes 2018 with small surplus despite very tight budget

The Town of Redwater finished 2018 with a surplus of $6,200. “There’s a small surplus,” said Corporate Services manager Diane Pysmeny. “We didn’t pad the budget to over-collect taxes. It was a very tight budget in 2018.”

While we were able to keep our taxes low, it shows on the surplus side. Honestly, I think we were too tight on the budget,” Mayor Mel Smith later commented. He said if the town had run into a major problem that required an expensive fix, it would either have had to take it out of reserves or borrow.

Throughout the year there were a number of infrastructure failures that required repairs which were not budgeted. As well, the town received no unbudgeted revenues such as money from land sales or offset levies.

Budgeted reserve transfers were $60,500 into the water, sewer, garbage and gas utility capital investment reserve, $22,400 for fire department capital equipment and $200 for cemetery perpetual care. In order to have $83,100 for those budgeted transfers into reserves, council authorized project specific transfers out of other restricted reserves to cover the cost overages on projects and unbudgeted work.

Just over $27,400 was taken from the general street reserve to cover additional road work that was done and $8,000 from the sidewalks reserve for sidewalk repairs. From the Pembina Place facility reserve $20,000 was transferred out to cover the heater and brine pump repairs; $10,000 was transferred from the general utility reserve to cover emergency repairs to the lift pump and water mains.

From the special projects reserve $10,600 was taken for the 49 Avenue project and $7,100 for a walking trail in the Willows development. Council approved the transfers without discussion during its April 1 meeting.

Zero tax increase being considered by Sturgeon

Although the 2019 Taxation Rates Bylaw proposes a 0% increase in property taxes, the same percentage increase presented in the budget. This bylaw reinforces Council’s direction to respect residents and minimize the impact taxes present in a poor provincial economic climate,” states background information from administration.

The report shows the County will raise $67.6 million in total property tax revenue including requisitions (compared to $66.8 million in 2018).

Of that, general municipal property taxes amount to $50,061,338 (Up from $49.3 million in 2018). Other funds being collected through property taxes for three requisitions: the 2019 Homestead Housing requisition of $808,993 (an increase of 6%) has been received; the 2019 Alberta School Foundation requisition is estimated at $16,619,992 net; and the 2019 Designated Industrial Property requisition of $150,486 (increased by 5% due to tax rate increase as well as assessment).

Administration points to an additional huge factor in the County finances: “The Sturgeon Refinery revenue was not included in the tax rate bylaw development as the plant is not yet commissioned. The estimated $30 million of refinery revenue identified during the budget cycle was allocated to capital projects and reserves, and as such, will not impact operations.”

The report notes that municipal taxes are the most important single source of revenue for Sturgeon County. “Approximately 70% of operating revenues in 2019 will be derived from municipal property taxes.” While the tax rate is not increasing, individual properties may see some variations as a result of changes in assessment. “Assessments used for budget purposes are estimated approximately eight months prior to the availability of final figures. The estimate is required to gain an understanding of the net impact the budget will have on property taxation in the County,” administration notes, also indicating “Overall increase in assessment values from the 2018 to 2019 was 0.4% for residential and 3.2% for non-residential.”

The tax rate contained in the draft bylaw rate .0036449 (or 3.6449 mills); non-residential .0102808 (10.2808 mills); farmland .0094700 (9.4 mills). However, machinery & equipment .0102808; low income .0020000 (2.0 mills); business .0036449; and non-profit .0020000.

The Sturgeon County council will be considering a taxation bylaw on April 9 which contains a 0% increase for residential and 3.2% for non-residential, machinery & equipment .0102808, low income .0020000, business .0036449, and non-profit .0020000.

Museum volunteers create warm welcome for visitors

The Redwater Museum has its spring display set up. “We try to do something different every month,” said vice president Audrey Petruk. “Hopefully, people will notice.”

Last year the museum was open throughout the summer and welcomed about 500 visitors. At present it is open Thursday and Saturday afternoons. If the museum gets a grant for summer staff, it will be open Monday to Saturday.

Museum volunteers continue to offer community programs such as hosting Seniors for tea and having students visit the museum to see the displays and make crafts.

New volunteers are always welcome. Members are still fixing some effects from the 2016 flood in the museum; some story boards are showing the effects of the humidity. Although the members would like more space for all the artifacts, they would also love to receive some items from the French Val Soucy settlement, which was home to some of the first settlers in the area.

Volunteers are the heart of our Community

Thank you to all those that volunteer in the community throughout the year. The time, effort and dedication by all volunteers enriches the County in countless ways. Thank you for making a difference in your community and in making Thorhild County a great place to live!

Thank You! Volunteering ROCK!

Volunteer action is like a stone thrown in a lake: its effect has a direct impact. At the same time, like ripples, volunteer efforts reach out far and wide to improve communities.

Volunteers help keep library running smoothly

Redwater Public Library volunteers provide valued services.

“We have four very dedicated volunteers,” said librarian Alice Paszek. “We would not be able to run as smoothly without them. A lot of programming wouldn’t happen without our volunteers.”

On Tuesdays Vicky Dybysto-Skinner shelves items and helps with processing. Wednesdays Arlene Moody processes and catalogues items. On Thursdays Carla Olsen and Gail Formanski do many time-consuming things such as cut labels and sort supplies.

As well, the Friends of the Redwater Public Library members support library events and raise funds for the library.

Small business mill rate discount continues

Small businesses within Thorhild County may again lower their municipal taxes by registering for the Non-Residential Small Business Sub-Class. The deadline to apply is April 30. Businesses must have had fewer than 25 employees in Canada on Dec. 31, 2018, and be on a non-residential property that is not designated industrial.

“A declaration must be filed annually to remain in the non-residential small business sub-class,” said CAO Wayne Franklin during the March 26 council meeting. “We anticipate close to 50 applications.”

Last year 46 Thorhild County businesses were approved for the non-residential small business sub-class. They paid a tax rate that was 23 percent lower than the remainder of the non-residential properties, which include large businesses such as oil companies and linear properties. The small businesses saved a total of $39,901 compared to what they would have paid if not in the small business sub-class. That was an average of $867 less in taxes paid per business.

Smoky Lake County council passed a bylaw allowing the county to create a non-residential small business sub-class last August, so it has the option of establishing sub-class rates when setting this year’s mill rates.

Redwater has not passed a bylaw allowing a non-residential small business sub-class, however the spread between the residential rate and non-residential is much lower than the rural municipalities.

Because Smoky Lake belongs to the Northern Lights Library System (NLLS) its library card holders can access books, dvds, cds and electronic items from libraries across the province.

The cost of the free library memberships will be paid by a $1,500 contribution from the Town of Smoky Lake and $1,000 from Smoky Lake County. That covers the $2,500 the library borrows as revenue from the sale of library memberships. The library usually sells memberships for $20, which purchases either an individual or a family membership.

Smoky Lake town and county also each gave $300 for a total of $600 to pay for the anniversary purchases either an individual or a family member’s library card.

Free Smoky Lake Library cards mark 75th anniversary

The Smoky Lake Public Library is giving out free membership cards this year in celebration of the library’s 75th anniversary. An anniversary party will be held June 12.

Library manager Melody Kaban said she hopes the free library cards will result in a 10 percent increase in library members.

“We hope to attract new members,” said Kaban. “We’ll try to keep them once they see the services. We have approximately 200 members now. Those people will benefit and appreciate the free library cards.”

Smoky Lake town and county also each gave $300 for a total of $600 to pay for the anniversary purchases either an individual or a family member’s library card.

Because Smoky Lake belongs to the Northern Lights Library System (NLLS) its library card holders can access books, dvds, cds and electronic items from libraries across the province.

The cost of the free library memberships will be paid by a $1,500 contribution from the Town of Smoky Lake and $1,000 from Smoky Lake County. That covers the $2,500 the library borrows as revenue from the sale of library memberships. The library usually sells memberships for $20, which purchases either an individual or a family member’s library card.

The Town of Redwater will continue to have an on-staff Bylaw Officer rather than change to a Community Peace Officer (CPO) or enter into a long term contract with Sturgeon County for enforcement services.

During the April 1 council meeting CAO Deb Hamilton briefly reviewed those options. The town has $84,000 in its 2019 budget for a bylaw officer. Hamilton estimated it would cost more than double that (excluding equipment and start up costs) to hire a full time CPO. That is because a CPO position must meet Alberta Solicitor General department requirements, including specific modifications to a vehicle, equipment, operating procedures, reports and audits.

Similarly, if Redwater were to contract a Sturgeon County CPO for more than 21 hours per week, Sturgeon would need to hire an additional CPO and purchase a vehicle and equipment for the position.

"One benefit that the Redwater community has over many of our neighbors is that there is an RCMP detachment right in the town who have always worked closely with the town’s bylaw enforcement staff,” said Hamilton.

Coun. Dave McRae noted the provincial government is reviewing the Police Act and the funding of police by communities, so CPO costs could change in the near future.

Council gave first reading to a modified Bylaw Enforcement Officer bylaw that will replace the former bylaw passed in 2009. Changes to the bylaw are not substantive, but consist of wording changes recommended by the town’s legal counsel.

For the past few months (since mid November 2018) Redwater has had a temporary contract with Sturgeon County Protective Services to provide basic enforcement services in the town for six hours per week. The town is in the process of hiring a full time Bylaw Enforcement Officer. That decision was made following closed session discussions by council and administration last month.

Bylaw officer duties include enforcement of the Community Standards, Traffic and Animal Control bylaws; supervision of the town campground and coordination with Alberta Fish and Wildlife officers to deal with wildlife in the town. The bylaw officer also participates in community programs such as bike rodeos, animal awareness, drug awareness, school safety, anti-bullying and Communities in Bloom.

Waskatenau’s Holy Family Catholic School students Jordanna Cruickshank, Anthony Bosch and Jake Shwetz participated in a mock legislature session during their visit to the Alberta Legislature.

In the early morning of March 5, the Phoenix Motel & Lounge in Newbrook was the victim of Arson. A pickup truck, believed to be a newer light coloured Ford was captured on video surveillance heading north on 50 street in Newbrook shortly after the fire was believed to have been set. If you have any information regarding this vehicle or the Arson itself, contact the Redwater RCMP Detachment.
