Aspen View Public Schools has a plan in place to safely re-open its schools to staff and students. The process began within the division’s re-entry team planned for the first COVID-19 related funding to school boards. However, the Aspen View board of education will be launching a campaign to be teachers hired to work with students in an online environment. Final decisions on this COVID campaign will be made in August.

Aspen View Public Schools has a plan in place to safely re-open its schools to staff and students. The process began within the division’s re-entry team planned for the first day of school in the fall is a difficult one; we are prepared to do whatever it takes to assist parents in the type of education that they and their families experience anxiety. There will be hand washing stations in multiple locations. “We will be educating students daily on appropriate hand hygiene,” O’Shea said.

He anticipates gym classes will focus more on individual sports and less on sports where there is contact between players. Still, the division recognizes the need to address the mental health of families that may experience anxiety regarding a return to work, so the student services team has been working with supports for students, their families, and staff members.

“We understand that when decisions are to send their students to school is a difficult one; we understand that the decision to keep students at home in the fall is a difficult one; we are prepared to do whatever it takes to assist parents in the type of education that they and their families experience anxiety. New SUV with colorful graphics sparks concern from taxpayer

For reasons only known to the Town management, it is obviously promoting the Town council as if it were the grand parade mar- shall for this year’s town parade. We cannot afford to repair roads, sew- ers etc., but we can buy or lease a very nice SUV for the Town employees to abuse similar to the rest of the fleet. It must have been on its maiden voyage as it is sparkling spicely clean, not a scratch on the rims vehicles concealed in mud. With interest the only well travelled muddy road in Redwater is the road to and from the Town main- tenance yard that the employees travel often for lunch, potty, and coffee breaks.

My previous request to the Town has not been acted upon as of this date. I was told that I had to do an appraisal on my property. I assumed that by doing so I would be a town employee. I am still waiting for the town to provide me with their WCB number and my new hire employee contract in case I am injured completing their assessment. I am still waiting for the contract fee for doing their assessment as I am very sure that the assessors do it for free.

Again to answer the suggestion of some Council members, no I will not move away from the area.

Redwater daycare open with assistance of federal programs

Little Steps Daycare in Redwater is open to care for children, but it could not do so without the federal government’s support. Owners Vicky and Steve Williams had closed the daycare March 13 because of the COVID-19 pandemic.

They re-opened the daycare June 1.

“When we opened, we knew we’d run at a loss,” said Vicky. “Without the help from the federal government, we would not be running now.”

They had 45-50 children from 45 families in mid March. They opened in June with 13 children and were up to 22 children by July 23. Under the COVID pandemic rules, Little Steps can have up to two cohorts of 30 children each.

“We had parents ringing us, absolutely desperate, wanting us to open,” said Steve. While at first they felt prevyous to the required protocols in place and are now comfortable with the routines designed to keep staff and children safe.

These include staff wearing masks, no one but staff and children allowed inside the second door of the building, and temperature taken and health questions completed for everyone every day. As well, the tables are spread out and chairs separated.

Play centers with water or playdough are closed. Instead, all children have their own packages with things like playdough and crayons that can not be regularly disinfected.

“The rooms are disinfected three times daily and shared toys twice daily. The older and younger groups have their own areas and do not mix.”

While closed, Williams disinfected the rooms, cleaned toys, did some work in the play area and struggled to pay the bills. They were permitted to re-open in mid May, but delayed until the start of June in order to set up to operate under the required Alberta Health Services regulations.

“We have a good routine going now,” said Vicky. “Routine is half the battle, learning what all to do,” added Steve.

That works for operations and staff and children’s safety. It does not help with the finances.

“We’re still struggling,” said Vicky. “Without the help of the federal government we wouldn’t be open. When we opened we asked the Town if we could have relief from the tax bill while we were closed. I was very disheartened when we were denied. We opened for the town people. We opened for a loss to accommodate their needs.”

“We were really upset with that.” Steve said. “We’re more than pleased with the efforts the federal government has put in.”

When contacted later Redwater town manager Larry Davidson said council carefully considered Williams’ request for tax abatement during the June 2 council meeting.

“There were many businesses forced to close during the early stages of the pandemic,” he said. “Council did not want to offer something that they could not offer to everyone consistently. Businesses are able to access different federal programs including loans of $40,000 with $10,000 being non repayable; there are wage programs to provide up to 75 percent of wages.”

Davidson noted that council approved a utility payment deferral from March 18 to June 30 to assist businesses and residents affected by the pandemic with their cash flow. Council also changed the tax deadline from June 30 to Aug. 31 and amended the tax penalty from a 10 percent penalty due July 1 to a five percent penalty due Sept. 1 and a further penalty due Nov. 1.

“The town has a limited ability to abate taxes,” said Davidson. “Council cut $138,652 from the 2020 operating budget to ensure a zero percent tax increase.”

He said the full financial impact for municipalities is not known because they will likely see less tax revenue while incurring additional expenses to ensure the safety of staff and the public.

“Council has been prudent in ensuring other budgeted monies were reallocated for flood mitigation, something the public has been very supportive of,” added Davidson.

When we opened we asked the Town if we could have a loss to accommodate their needs."

County increases funding toward Redwater truckfill

Sturgeon County Council unanimously approved authorizing Administration to execute the amended TruckFill Water Station Agreement with the Town of Redwater that will see an additional $10,000 go into the Town’s coffers to help offset their operational costs for the station.

Manager Utility and Waste Management Services Jeffrey Yanew said, “A little over a year has passed since the County took over account management services, the Town’s truckfill. During this time the County and Town have seen higher than expected use.

The Town approached the County looking to amend the existing TruckFill Agreement with Sturgeon County in hopes of recovering costs such as more frequent snow and ice removal, hose replacement, inspections and customer service requests associated with the increased traffic.

The amended agreement will see an additional one dollar per cubic metre increase charged to the County, over and above the wholesale rate of $1.65.

“Residents will not see any increase in rates with this proposed amendment,” Yanew said. “In 2019 the County received approximately $17,000 in revenue. Under the new agreement that the County will go to $7,000.

“It is likely that the $7,000 in revenue would cover costs for County Administration services as well as put some money aside for the capital replacement of the water dispensing unit,” Yanew concluded.

County administration supported the amendment stating the new arrangement would be “equitable for both parties.”
