Most local municipalities ban alcohol as a councillor expense, but there are exceptions

Following Sturgeon County’s adoption in August of a Councillor Expense Policy that includes allowing councillors to be reimbursed for the cost of alcoholic beverages purchased under specific conditions, Reeve Craig Lukinuk pointed out the county policy recognizes that “in order to carry out county business, it is necessary for council members to network, meet with ratepayers, participate in training, and attend related business and community functions.”

The policy allows a councillor engaged in an authorized County Hospitality Event to submit receipts for alcoholic and other beverages and food purchased at these special events for consumption by the councillor and others while promoting the interests of Smoky Lake County.

This practice is followed by the current council. In 2019 expenses spent approximately $730 on alcoholic beverages. To date in 2020 the total is approximately $250.

Thorhild County does not have a policy regarding reimbursement for alcohol purchases.

CAO Farrell O’Malley said, “It is the continuing practice of Thorhild County to not reimburse for alcohol purchases made by council members and staff are required to personally pay for any alcoholic beverages and are not permitted to submit a reimbursement claim.”

The Business Expense Policy for the Town of Redwater, includes allowing councillors to purchase alcohol and personally pays for the alcoholic beverages served at the event.

CAO Farrell O’Malley said, “In order to carry out town business, the councillor pays.”

Town of Gibbons does not have a council policy regarding alcoholic beverages and council members do not get reimbursed for alcohol purchased for guests.

CAO Farrell O’Malley said, “As a general practice, when council holds special celebrations such as the Seniors Alumni Christmas Dinner or other events that include alcohol, the wine or beverages served are part of the meal, the cost of alcoholic beverages is built into the ticket price or gets sponsored by a private donor.”

The amount that may be expended on alcoholic beverages by the council for such events is $250 per year. At most events guests and councilors purchase their own beverages with no reimbursement.

Town of Smoky Lake council staff do not expense alcohol. The town policy on Council Honorariums, Per Diems and Expenses specifically states, “The cost of alcoholic beverages will not be reimbursed.”

The town is allowed to purchase alcohol and a liquor license for special events like the town Christmas party.

“Love Your Dance studio in Radway and Westlock is taking extra steps to safely offer the benefits of dance instruction during the COVID-19 pandemic while providing program flexibility and limiting the financial commitment required by participants.”

Director Nathan Young said changes to this year’s programs include acceptance of late registrations, a two month commitment to the program instead of a full year, no attendance at festivals (if any are held), and instruction geared to education and technique instead of performance. That gives experienced dancers the opportunity to develop and grow while creating perfect conditions for new students to try dance without making huge time and financial commitments.

“We felt some families might feel they need a short commitment,” said Young. “COVID has impacted finances.”

He noted that dance classes are more than exercise, fun and a social event. They provide a routine for students, create team building and increase both physical and mental health.

Egremont author shares recipes with stories

Irene Gaudet of Egremont just published a cookbook with a difference. Titled “Mom, how do you...?” it is a collection of family recipes along with some stories relating to them or the people who loved them.

Gaudet said, “The idea for this book came from many conversations with my grown children who would call me up or send me a message online and ask me “Mom, how do you...?” Well, sometimes the answer was at hand or deep in the recesses of my memory. Other times I would have to go searching for a recipe or an answer.”

The idea for this book germinated in her mind for a long while. “After years of editing and publishing books for my husband, Bob Hooey, and other authors, it was time to put my own words to print,” said Gaudet. “So, during the pandemic shutdown, I finally sat down at my computer and got my book into print.”

“I bought for recipes, I often first read through cookbooks, not for the recipes, but to read,” said Gaudet. “I know I have. Even for those that I bought for recipes, I often first read through the recipes, skimming for must try ones or thinking others just don’t seem right. It is for those people that I also wrote this book. I hope that you enjoy the stories as much as the recipes.”

Some of the recipes are labelled as coming from her mother, Lillian Sidor or her grandmother, Sophie Sidor. Lillian’s recipes are ones she collected and used over the years. Many were written in her own hand into recipe books. Sophie, Gaudet’s Baba or paternal grandmother, rarely wrote down her recipes. She handed them down orally as she worked side by side with Gaudet. “They were finally written by me from my memories,” Gaudet said. “Some of these came from who knows where over the years. Handed down, some cookbook, some newspaper clipping. But they have been tried, tested, and loved. As Bob often says, “Tested and husband approved!”

Gaudet’s book has been garnering interest in Canada and around the world. It is available on Amazon. Signed copies by the author can be ordered from www.SuccessPublications.ca or from the book site at www.momhowdoyoudo.com. In Redwater, Donna Couston at Wadi Tub and Tailor has them on her counter.

Gaudet has started collecting recipes for her sequel for 2022.
Sturgeon County Council members were on-hand to thank G3 Canada Ltd. for their generous donation of grain rescue equipment to its Emergency Services department. The life-saving “Res Q Tube” and auger, valued at more than $4,000, is vital in allowing firefighters to conduct a safe and effective rescue of a person trapped in grain. Sturgeon County firefighters held a training session with the equipment in August.

“G3’s commitment to supporting grain safety helps us protect our farmers and producers,” said Sturgeon County Mayor Alanna Hratin. “We want to thank G3 for their generous donation and ongoing support.”

Radway Community Services manager Garnet Davison is embarking on a career change into municipal service. "I saw the opportunity and dedicated myself to make the shift," he said. Although Davison spent the last five years with Community Services and Parks and Facility Maintenance in Edson, before that he was a frequent visitor to Redwater. As an area manager with NewAlta, he oversaw projects in the region. When the economy slumped and he was laid off, he embarked on a career change into municipal service. "I saw the opportunity and dedicated myself to make the shift," he said. When the opportunity arose to come to Redwater, he took it. "I know the area and know it’s a nice little town," Davison said. "It was a good opportunity for me." He feels he can be good for the community as well. He is passionate about involve-ment with youth and seniors and improving his community as a whole. "I think I’m a pretty approachable person," said Davison. "I see the good things. I’m positive and enjoy the family lifestyle." He is currently "assessing and delving into" what the town has. Outside of work Davison enjoys time with his three children, hiking, rugby and mountain bike riding.

Radway Library manager Sandra Moschansky prepares to put returned books and movies back on the shelves. "I’m looking forward to seeing patrons come in," she said. "We have many new items because even though we’ve been closed, books kept coming in." The library is now open with COVID-19 protocols in place. Patrons are asked to sanitize their hands and maintain physical distancing.

Sturgeon mandatory mask bylaw kicks back in

Just one week after going off mandatory face coverings in public spaces, Sturgeon County was back on the COVID-19 ‘watch’ list with 15 active cases. Once the ‘watch’ designation was in place, the bylaw stepped back in.

Moschansky prepares to put returned books and movies back on the shelves.

Sturgeon’s Temporary Mandatory Face Coverings bylaw remains in effect as long as Sturgeon County as well as public vehicles such as taxis or shuttles. It’s a plus for municipalities. "Council designed this bylaw to be flexible to accommodate," said Mayor Dave Black. "It’s quiet; it’s pretty, and for the most part, it’s well looked after. There’s lots of community involvement by resi-dents." He noted the arboretum is an excellent example of what volunteers can accomplish.

Sturgeon mandatory face coverings bylaw was triggered automatically. The bylaw makes masks mandatory in all indoor or substantially enclosed spaces that are available to the public, whether owned privately or by Sturgeon County as well as public vehicles such as taxis or shuttles.

"Council designed this bylaw to be flexible to reflect what’s happening in the County. As the num-bers have gone up, it makes sense that our preventative measures should also increase," said Mayor Alanna Hustace.

The bylaw remains in effect as long as Sturgeon County region is classified as ‘watch’ by the Government of Alberta and is only lifted if the region’s classification is changed to ‘open’ for 14 consecutive days.
Dance studio adapts to pandemic protocols

When instructors work closely with students to correct technique, align moves and spot for safety, they sanitize and wear masks. Those changes were piloted during a handful of drop-in classes during the summer and the August Dance Intensive which students can take to prepare for the upcoming season.

The change to non-performance instruction was made after surveying the dance families. It is much like the technique-based classes Young has offered for the past several years in addition to performance classes.

Love Your Dance classes begin Oct. 2 in Radway. Young said parents who waited until after school began to make decisions regarding extra curricular activities are now contacting him.

“We’re still open to taking registrations,” he said. “We can add classes if needed.” He is making a special effort to schedule classes so students taking more than one class can do so in one day and minimize the time they need to travel.

Young has taught dance for the past 16 years. He has owned Love Your Dance studio for the past seven years and worked out of the Radway studio for five years. In early March this year Young completed his Youth Protection Advocates in Dance Certification, which is a safety and wellness certification. This summer he finished his three-year Associated Dance Arts for Professional Teachers (ADAPT) certification, so he can now offer exams for students.
Heidinger returns to Smoky Lake and opens The Barbershop

Hairy-list and barber Taylor Heidinger is now serving her home community of Smoky Lake. She is the owner of The Barbershop in the Town of Smoky Lake.

“I have been doing hair for five years now as a Red Seal Journeymen Hairy-list and trained Barber,” said Heidinger. “I have been barbering for three years. I have a passion for clean cuts and sharp lines, but I also don’t mind a mullet or two.”

Heidinger grew up in Smoky Lake and attended school there. “I was one of the first students in the Cosmetology program when it was introduced in the school,” she recalled. “I took that class for four years, where I really got a head start on my career in hair.” After she graduated from high school, she attended Est’Elle Academy of Hair Design in Edmonton, where she learned everything from coloring, perming, and barbering.

“I moved back to Smoky after hair school to start my apprenticeship,” Heidinger said. “Then I moved to Fort Saskatchewan and furthered my learning at some bigger and busier salons. It was in Fort Saskatchewan that I started barbering and knew I had found my calling in the hair industry.”

After doing hair for a few years, she was ready to fulfill her second dream, that of becoming a nurse. In December 2018 she moved to Saskatoon to fulfill her second dream, that of becoming a nurse.
